The finest musicians to spring from the world of jazz have clearly had an advantage when it comes to branching into other genres of music. Their mastery of composition, arranging, and sight reading—coupled with their flair for improvisation and spontaneous creation—make them possibly the most seasoned and adaptable musicians in the art. Grammy® Award winner Christian McBride, chameleonic virtuoso of the acoustic and electric bass, stands tall at the top of this clique. Beginning in 1989 — the beginning of an amazing career in which he still has wider-reaching goals to attain — the Philadelphian has thus far been first-called to accompany literally hundreds of fine artists, ranging in an impressive array from McCoy Tyner and Sting to Kathleen Battle and Diana Krall. However, it is his own recordings — albums that encompass a diverse canon of original compositions and imaginatively arranged covers — that reveal the totality of his musicianship. He currently leads one of the hottest bands in music — the propulsive Christian McBride Band (saxophonist Ron Blake, keyboardist Geoffrey Keezer and drummer Terreon Gully).
